Marcus, McMahon & Myers protects your legal rights so you can protect your business.

We work closely with business owners of all sizes on a full range of legal services, including but not limited to:

- Commercial litigation
- Business insurance coverage disputes
- Commercial leasing
- Landlord-tenant matters
- Business incorporation
- Operating agreements
- Shareholder agreements
- Employment agreements
- Mergers and acquisitions

When starting a new business, the owner's attention is rightfully focused on building a client roster as quickly as possible. There are other risks, however, that should not be overlooked.

Advance planning will help you to choose the right type of business formation, based on your unique situation. The attorneys of Marcus, McMahon & Myers can review the advantages and disadvantages of a C versus S corporation, or an LLC.

If you have shareholders, we can help you document what happens to the business if one partner wants to sell their shares or becomes incapacitated. A properly written Shareholders agreement can help you avoid expensive and emotionally difficult disputes at a future date.

Employees also represent a risk to your business. A disgruntled employee can steal valuable trade secrets, or take their knowledge of your business and clients to a competing firm. We can help you create personnel policies and employee agreements to protect your proprietary business assets.

As your business grows, you may consider purchasing another company or even selling yours for the right price. Our experience in corporate M&A transactions can help you value your company, seek the best terms, and reduce your risks.

Greg McMahon, one of the firm's founding members, is active in the Orlando business community as the Vice President and Director of Legal Affairs for the Global Trade and Commerce Association.
